DESCRIPTION:

The main themes of this book-planning and occlusion-are inseparable determinants for the success of every restorative treatment and for the long-term reputation of a dental practice. Thus, in a clear and uncomplicated manner, this book presents protocols containing all the relevant aspects related to case planning with different degrees of complexity. The primary purpose of the book is to obtain results with consistency and predictability that exceed the expectations of patients and dentists. An extensive review of the literature on occlusion is presented so that the reader can understand all the critical principles related to the topic and apply them in a practical and effective manner.
